Will Hembroff assists his clients with the resolution of commercial and civil disputes through litigation, mediation and alternate dispute resolution measures. He appears at all levels of Court in Alberta and has extensive Court of Appeal and civil jury trial experience. He has represented clients on leave applications at the Supreme Court of Canada. Will appears regularly before administrative tribunals to assist professionals (including physicians, lawyers and pharmacists) with complaint and disciplinary matters.

Will's practice is focused on commercial litigation and tort litigation. On the commercial side, he deals with a broad range of matters including contract and shareholder disputes, commercial leases and landlord-tenant disputes, construction law cases and employment matters.

Will is an experienced insurance litigator and knows how insurance companies work. He effectively negotiates with insurers to obtain coverage for his clients when coverage is unfairly denied, and he will litigate when necessary. He provides expert insurance coverage opinions and advice on all types of insurance policies, including those related to personal insurance (property, auto, disability, travel and life), and commercial insurance (CGL, DO, and Professional Liability or EO).

Will is also called on to assist clients in the efficient resolution of catastrophic injury and fatality claims, and he practices health law, defending physicians in administrative matters and in complex medical malpractice cases.
