Tayler Meagher has a general commercial litigation practice, with an emphasis on professional negligence defence, health law, and employment law.

Tayler represents physicians in litigation and regulatory matters, including malpractice actions, professional discipline, and billing reviews. Tayler advises both employers and employees on a variety of matters, including wrongful and constructive dismissal, severance entitlements and human rights within the workplace. She has assisted on matters in all levels of the Alberta court system and in several administrative tribunals.

Prior to becoming an associate, Tayler summered and articulated with the firm.

In addition to her practice, Tayler volunteers with the Edmonton Community Legal Centre, providing summary legal advice to low-income individuals.
