Beth Jonah has a general civil litigation law practice with an emphasis on wills and estates, occupational health and safety law, and construction and environmental disputes. She has advised on a variety of commercial and civil matters and assisted on disputes before various levels of Alberta courts and administrative tribunals, including the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Alberta and Alberta Teachers' Association.

Before becoming an associate, Beth summered and articulated with the firm. She also previously worked with the Permanent Mission of Canada to the United Nations.

While attending law school at the University of Alberta, Beth worked as a Research Assistant on international dispute resolution mechanisms. She won the Lieberman Prize in Law and Medicine and Law Students' Association Award. During law school, Beth volunteered her time to various student groups, including as Vice-President Services for the Law Students' Association and Executive Producer of Law Show.
