During his undergraduate degree before law school, Luc worked as a junior accountant. During law school, he worked in-house at a large energy industry company in Calgary, and after completing his law degree he articulated at a national firm in Calgary.

Active in his community, Luc volunteers at Calgary Legal Guidance where he provides free legal support to those who do not have access to paid services. Luc is also a sessional professor at the University of Lethbridge's Calgary campus teaching Introduction to Business Law at the undergraduate level.

In his free time, Luc enjoys spending time with his family, reading and exploring new countries. He has visited over 20 countries so far and has taste-tested chicken McNuggets in each of them, adding a unique flavour to his travel experiences.
